

The native American Indians boiled their syrup by putting hot rocks into a hollowed out log filled with sap.